

HEABC workshops and webinars

Affordable professional development for frontline supervisors and human resource professionals

HEABC Industry Leads Alissa Perry, Shawn Johnston and Carmen Hamilton

Professional development can be expensive and it can be challenging to find the right fit. Some courses have the right content, but are focused on the wrong industry, and others sound great but are either too expensive, overly time-consuming or have inconvenient travel requirements.

HEABC offers a variety of affordable, health-sector specific workshops and webinars for human resources and labour relations staff, as well as frontline managers and those who supervise employees.

Looking to improve your performance management skills? Increase your knowledge of proper recruitment/selection, duty-to-accommodate or grievance management processes? Do a better job of responding to workplace bullying and harassment? There is an HEABC course for you.

Workshops and webinars are taught by HEABC staff experts who have extensive professional experience and first-hand knowledge of BC's health sector labour relations and human resources environment.

"We consistently receive great feedback from workshop and webinar participants," says Tony Collins, HEABC Vice-President, Knowledge Management & Education Services, noting that in follow-up surveys, over 90 per cent of workshop participants indicate they are satisfied with the education sessions. "To ensure our members' needs are being met, we continually evolve our offerings – adding new courses and updating course materials to reflect today's workplace."

HEABC workshops and webinars are open only to employees of HEABC member organizations. For course descriptions, schedules and to register online, go to www.heabc.bc.ca.
